

Research cooperation

ISM is involved in various research networks, such as the City of Dortmund's Science Master Plan and various ongoing activities and projects in the field of entrepreneurship. Through these activities, ISM has been able to attract universities, institutes, and consulting firms as cooperation partners for further project proposals. Third-party funded research focuses on highly topical research areas, particularly in the fields of digitalization and sustainability.

In addition, ISM's institutes and departments are involved in specialist networks. ISM offers doctoral opportunities in cooperation with international university partners. These partners include Strathclyde Business School (SBS) and Edinburgh Napier University (ENU) in Scotland, Bond Business School (BBS) in Australia, Westcliff University in Irvine, USA, and Lovely Professional University in Jalandhar, India. Through these cooperative doctoral programs and other individual cooperations, joint research topics can be defined and addressed at an international level. This enables ISM to further intensify its international cooperation and also meet the demand for practice-oriented doctoral opportunities.
